Brown Dissects Sales Tax

In a speech before the Kentucky Hardware and Implement Association last week John Young Brown, Congressman elect and speaker of the 1932 session of the Kentucky house of representatives, in discussing the proposal to levy a state sales tax said among other things:

"The people should know the facts before any change is made in the present set-up of taxation in Kentucky. The people of Kentucky should acquaint themselves with the political set-up in Kentucky. They should know that for thirty years in Kentucky special corporations have joined with the State jobholders' political organizations, which have controlled Kentucky government, regardless of which political party happened to be in the saddle.

"The people should know that there was submitted to the Governor of the Commonwealth at the last Legislature, a proposal that a homestead exemption law be enacted under the terms of which every homeowner of Kentucky be allowed exemption from State taxation in an amount sufficient to grant the relief which property owners now need, but that this proposal was rejected in favor of the sales tax and exempting all property from real estate taxation.

"It is evident, therefore, that those in authority are not seeking the relief of those who need relief but are seeking to pamper further the special privileges that for many years have been in the saddle in Kentucky. It is easy to see that the benefits under the new system will go exclusively to the franchise corporations which would pay no taxes under the new system, unless they realized a net income in such an amount that it could not be offset by their expert accountants, and that the burden of taxation would be shifted to the shoulders of the consuming public.

"The peopleshould know that with this new tax producing four million dollars extra revenue above that now realized by the tax commission , there would be no necessity for economy in government. They should know that this tax is really an income tax turned upside down; that the tax is levied not according to ability to pay, but both on ability and inability to pay; that the poor are taxed a higher percentage than the rich; that mail order houses and out-of-State business will immediately start a drive on Kentucky business, because of the disadvantage under which Kentucky business would labor. That this measure, by taking the taxes off of the great concerns of our State and placing a heavier burden on the general public, is but another measure aiding and hastening the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few; that it is a measure peculiarly pleasing to privileged wealth.

"It is not reasonable to believe that this tax commissioner who has served so well for two political parties, and whose programme is so strongly backed by the great interests of Kentucky, had the people in mind when he presented to them this matchless tax programme, which would take off all tax and bring about an era of government support without pain.

"The taxpayers of Kentucky can well profit by the sage advice of the ancient oracle that warned the Trojans to 'beware of Greeks bearing gifts.'

"This is the age-old fight of special privilege in the saddle attempting to shoulder the burdens of government entirely upon the defenceless consumer who happened not to be able to make a contribution to political campaign funds, or to finance the political campaigns of members of the Legislature, and who have no patronage to trade to those who happened to reach the Legislature.

"The people should know further that these special interests, plus the job-holding organization at Frankfort are even now placing in each legislative district and in each senatorial district a candidate responsive to their wishes and financed by their money, power and influence; that these represenatives will care nothing for the taxpayers' interests, but will be subservient to the powers that place them in office. This has been the practice for many years in Kentucky, and has been allowed to succeed because the people have been asleep.

"If the people of Kentucky would have good government, they should select a candidate in each legislative district, and in each senatorial district, who has no ax to grind; no members in his family to get upon State payrolls; no influences that can swerve him from his devotion to duty, and the interests of his people, and such a candidate should be drafted to run for the Legislature, and every citizen in each respective district should rally to the support of this candidate, and thereby have in the Legislature a voice of the people instead of a voice for privilege. This is no easy task, but if government is worth having at all, it is worth working for, and if the abuses in government are to be corrected, it will be by an intelligent, alert citizenship devoting energy, time and patience to securing a Legislature responsive to the taxpayers' interests, rather than to the interests now in control in Kentucky's State government."

Mr. Brown had previously examined the State administration's fiscal standing and by statistical comparison showed that since 1923 the governmental cost in this State had increased almost 50 per cent more than the average increase in all the States.

GRANGE ACTIVITY

Rev. Samuel B. McGuire of Mt Sterling, a former member of the Kentucky State Grange, and the son of parents who were members of the Grange before him, was in town over the week end and on Monday addressed a body of farm folks at the court house stressing the usefulness of the grange orginization to the farmer in helping him to work out solutions for his various problems.

Mr. McGuire is a man of pleasing personality and has the happy ability to present a proposition in a straight forward and easily comprehended manner.

Five or six communities in the county are now studying grange literature with the idea of organizing grange centers in these sections.

The grange is the oldest existing farm organization. It has been dormant in Kentucky for a number of years. It will be a real honor for Morgan county if she will lead the way in the revitalization and reorganization of the grange in Kentucky.

Mr. McGuire expects to return within a few weeks to the county and expects some definite action at that time.

Probable A Vain Quest

It has long been our earnest ambition—which we begin to fear may never may be realized—to pay the income tax on a million dollars.

Both sides advanced splendid argument and each speaker put force and conviction into his argument.

The West Liberty team won, but it was no easy victory. Both teams will no doubt make for their schools an enviable record in the debating in the future, and if they improve in proportion to the way they made their first argument; stand a good chance to win the district if not the finals.

FACTS ABOUT PROHIBITION

The following was copied from Dr. S.Parkes Cadman's Questions and Answers in the Brooklyn Eagle a few months ago. Broadcast from Dayton, Ohio.

Question. "Why do you stand against the worker having his beer? He gets it in England, and I am told that Englishmen are more sober than Americans.

Answer by Dr. Cadman. "Your question comes to hand at the moment when British Parliamentarians report against the extension of the drink traffic, and British medical authorities are pleading that their countrymen give the children nourishing food. They point to the fact that under test, the children who get an extra daily ration of milk show an average increase in height of 23 per cent, and an average increase in weight of 45 per cent over those children who do not get the extra ration.

"It would seem that this basic food has a remarkable influence on physical development. Yet Great Britain consumes very much less milk than any other advanced nation. Beer takes its place. Under present conditions the industrial groups of that country are too poor to buy the beer, and the children do not get the milk. This much at least appears beyond argument.

"Further, if you can convince me that beer builds up the American home, fortifies its children, strengthens the parents to do their jobs more efficiently, or lessens the risk of physical injury and the dangers of vehicular traffic, you will have justified your claim and I shall have advocated an erroneous doctrine.

"But the facts based on experience flatly contradict the efficacy of beer or of any other intoxicating liquors when used as a beverage, to confer the physical benefits we have named. Milk produces a higher level of intelligence in our children than any other foods, while beer befuddles the brains of its users."

Clarence May and son William Dale, of Middletown, Ohio, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam May, over the week end. Mr. May is contemplating moving his radiator shop to Mt. Sterling in the near future.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

OLIVER B. (TICK) ARNETT

The Courier is authorized this week to make the formal announcement of Oliver B. (Tick) Arnett of West Liberty as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for representative of 100th Legislative district, composed of Morgan county.

Mr. Arnett is a graduate of the Louisvile College of Pharmacy and is the owner and proprietor of the Arnett Drug company of West Liberty. He is a son of former Senator Chas. D. Arnett of Louisville.

He has also had practical business experience and knows the needs of Morgan county business men and other citizens.

Mr. Arnett will outline at a later date the policies he expects to follow if nominated and elected. The Courier is sure that the voters of Morgan county will give his candidacy their serious consideration.

FOR CIRCUIT COURT CLERK

H. C. Franklin of Wells makes his bow to our readers this week and asks their consideration of his candidacy for Circuit Court Clerk. Mr. Franklin has been a farmer most of his life but has had real business training and is highly qualified for the office to which he aspires.

Here is to H. C. Franklin,
A man we all know well.
He needs no introduction
As any one can tell.
He is just big hearted Henry,
With smiles and never a frown,
Always ready to lend a hand
To a man when he is down.
For forty years he has been content
A Democrat to be
Marching with them in defeat,
Also in victory,
Never asking for a job
As long as he could work.
But now my freinds he's a candidate,
For Circuit Court Clerk.
His hair is growing grayer now,
His step it is more slow
Than when he joined our party ranks
Some forty years ago.
Democrats, both far and near,
Should rally to this man
And will whenever they feel the shake
Of his Democratic hand.
If the record of a well spent life
Is a boost for anyone,
Then H. C. Franklin will be our clerk,
For his race is already won.
Then join the gang good Democrats
Your duty do not shirk,
But vote for big hearted Henry Franklin,
For Circuit Court Clerk.

Merchants Fall Into Trap

Judging by the tenor of resolutions adopted by the Executive Committee of the Kentucky Retail Merchants Association at a meeting held on Monday, January 9, in Danville, that organization is about to fall headlong into a slick political trap set for it by political bosses in control of the present State administration at Frankfort.

Recently in a speech before the Louisville Board of Trade Governor Laffoon announced that in the event the voters of Kentucky ratified the Constitutional Amendment next November authorizing the exemption of real estate and tangible personal personal property from taxation for State purposes he would ask the 1934 General Assembly to pass a General Sales Tax to support revenue in lieu of that now collected from real estate and tangible personalty. He also added in the event the proposed amendment was defeated at the polls he would not advocate a Sales Tax before the Legislature.

This announcement by the Governor, coming more than a year before the meeting of the General Assembly, doubtless was a surprise to the uninitiated, as it was well known that many citizens of Kentucky, especially those engaged in retail business, are bitterly opposed to a General Sales Tax, and they did not stop to figure our why the Governor would "show his hand" this early in the fight. Evidently with but few exceptions, and including the entire executive committee of the Retail Merchants Association, they accepted the Governor's early announcement that he intended to advocate the adoption of a General Sales Tax as actuated by a desire to "come out in the open" with the program of his administeration.

But those who understand how the State's affairs are manipulated from behind the scenes by the Glenns, the Klairs and others of their ilk, never for amoment thought the Governor's early announcement was actuated by purely altruistic motives. They know that the political bosses do not care a rap whether the revenue comes from a tax on real estate or from a sales tax. All this gentry wants is the money. They also know that the bosses realize that exemption of real estate from State taxation is inevitable. They were a little puzzled at first to understand how the bosses expected to put over a general sales tax in the face of popular opposition as evidenced by the defeat of a similiar measure by the last Legislature. But not for long were they in doubt. The Governor's statement that in the event the Constitutional Amendment authorizing the exemption of real estate from State taxation was defeated he would not advocate a General Sales Tax, looked mighty suspicious. Analyzed it attempts to make the sales tax entirely dependent on the defeat of the Constitutional Amendment. It looks innocent, but in reality it is a well laid trap set to catch the retail merchants, with a boomerang carefully concealed to aid the bosses in putting over their sales tax. It was intended to trick the merchants into coming out in opposition to the Constitutional Amendment. This in turn would arouse the enmity of those favoring taking the State tax off real estate and turn them to the support of the sales tax scheme. And did it work? The executive committee of the Kentucky Merchants Association swallowed hook, line and sinker. At the Danville session they adopted strong resolutions opposing the adoption of the Constitutional Amendment removing the State tax on real estate, characterizing it as class legislation and calling on the people of Kentucky to vote it down at the polls.

We are surprised that the officers of the Merchants Association would allow themselves to be "taken in" by these political tricksters. It is nothing more or less than an attempt to "put over" a sales tax by arraying two classes of taxpayers in a fight against each other while the machine bosses sit on the sidelines like vultures assured of a feast whatever the outcome.

The interests of those opposing a general sales tax and those favoring the exemption of real estate from State taxation are identical. They should work together instead of at cross purposes. This is no time to increase taxation upon the people of Kentucky. What is sorely needed is to reduce the cost of government. Owners of real estate must be given some relief as it has been clearly proven that they are unable to pay the heavy taxes now imposed upon them. This should be the first duty of the coming General Assembly. Next the Legislators should cut out the waste and extravagance that honeycombs every department and agency of the State government and bring public expenditures down in keeping with the ability of the taxpayers to pay. After this has been done should more revenue be found necessary it should be raised by a tax on luxuries such as cigarettes, cigars and manufactured tobacco, or by diverting part of the road revenue into the general fund, rather than imposing a general sales tax which would be collected from those least able to pay.

The Merchants Association will need the aid of the farmers and home owners of Kentucky in order to defeat the general sales tax which the politicians are seeking to enact. But they will never secure it by arraying themselves against the real estate owners. The action taken at Danville Monday should be reconsidered and instead immediate steps should be taken by the Merchants Association to join forces with the farmers organization Known as the Kentucky Taxpayers League and stand shoulder to shoulder against the common enemy—extravagence and waste in government —The Shelby News.

COUNTY AGENTS COLUMN

Community Organizations

The county agent met with a group of farmers at Relief, January 12th, and these farmers agreed to undertake the following project work as recommended by the Kentucky Experiment Station: Korean lespedeza, 5 demonstrations; tobacco, 4 demonstrations; potatoes, 4 demonstrations; and a group of boys and girls were present and demanded the organization of a 4-H club, with 18 members. W. M. Ferguson was selected as leader of Korean project. Chas. Hamilton, tobacco project leader, and Willie Tiffe, potato project leader. This work is being started at Relief to acquaint all farmers of that section with methods as recommended by the Experiment Station.

Lecture by Truck Garden Specialist

Farmers of Morgan county will have an opportunity to hear a lecture on modern potato production at the courthouse in West Liberty at 10:00 o'clock A. M. Monday, January 30th, 1933. Mr. John S. Gardner, Truck Gardening Specialist, Kentucky Experiment Station, will be with us on the above date to tell of modern methods in growing Irish potatoes. All farmers are invited to this meeting , and we feel certain that those who attend will be well repaid for their trouble.

At the present time, more than 75 percent of the people of the county are without sufficient potatoes for home use. On the other hand, we have farmers in the county who followed Mr. Gardner's recommendations and produced more than $100 worth of potatoes which were sold, and who have plenty left for home use. We certainly hope that a large number of farmers will attend this lecture and learn how easy it is to produce an abundance of fine Irish potatoes.

Small Fruits

Mr. W. W. McGill, field agent, Horticultural Department, Kentucky Experiment Station, desires to interest many Morgan county farmers and club boys and girls in a small fruit project. The project as outlined by Mr. McGill, includes the cultivation of 100 strawberry, 50 Lathan raspberry, 50 Early Harvest blackberry and 6 grape vines, according to latest up-to-date methods. Information sheets will be furnished each grower.

Mr. McGill, who has had much experience in growing small fruits, estimates that this number of plants will afford the average family all the berries and grapes they might require for home use. One of Kentuckys leading nurseries has agreed to mail to individuals, the above order of plants at a cost of $3.00. Mr. McGill had to promise 3000 orders before he could get the reduced prices. It is hoped that many Morgan county farmers will write to the county agent, Chas. E. Gabbard, saying they want to get in on this small fruit project.

Season for Pruning Shrubs

January is a good time to prune shrubs, especially such large growing plants as lilacs, mock orange and the big privets, points out N. R. Elliott of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Dead wood can be removed at this season with little injury to the growing shoots of the plant. If the dead wood is left, the plants will present an unsightly appearance later in the season. In some instances the branches may not be dead, but so old that the only growth is at the tip. New growth can be encouraged by removing some of these.

Japanese barberry if often so neglected that it becomes unsightly. It should be thinned to some extent at this time of the year, if it is to have the desired growth during the coming season.

Shrubs that are to bloom in the early spring should not be pruned severely. To do so removes the bloom. Thinning is preferable to severe pruning. While thinning lessons the bloom, it encourages the development of better form in the plant.

Remove dead stalks or old stems as near the ground as possible. Use a saw or long handled pruning snips so that a good, clean cut will be made.

If shrubs are not doing well, an application of well rotted cow manure now will stimulate growth. Remove grass and weeds from shrubs. This not only improves the appearance of the premises but also permits the soil to absorb more moisture.

Crockett Community Work

On January 13th the county agent met with a group of farmers at Crockett, and the following projects were agreed upon: Tobacco, 4 demonstrations, J. W. Fannin, leader; Korean lespedeza, 6 demonstrations, B. P. Hutchins, leader; Potatoes, 5 demonstrations, A. W. Skaggs, leader.

Ezel 4-H Club

On January 21st the county agent met with 18 boys and girls at Ezel and organized a 4-H club. Mildred Salyer was elected president, and Walter Back was elected secretary. The other members present were: Eula Salyer, Conrad Rowland, Roy Rowland, Jr., Russell Lane, Wilburn Higgins, Eugene Salyer, Julia Rose, Nell Walsh, Frances Walsh, Velma Stamper, Lucille Stamper, Herman Motley, Lillian Murphy, Chalmer Combs and Boyd Murphy. Professor Davis, Miss Sara Conrad and W. R. Rowland gave valuable assistance in the organization of the club.

The Garden

The time to begin the gardening season for 1933 is at hand. By that is not meant that actual work can be started but rather arrangements made that when work can start, there will be no delay.

For example, now is the time to assure a plentiful supply of manure, for adequate manuring is the basis for success in any garden. It is well to see to the manuring of the garden spot, now, before the pressure of other work on the farm begins, and before other uses for that manure suggests themselves. The garden should come first, for the garden spot is the most valuable piece of land on the farm. A 3 inch coat of manure is not too much.

Another thing to take up now, is making out a seed list. While it is true that in most localities there are seedsmen who carry a complete line of varieties, it is true, too, that if thematterofbuying seed is put off until the seed is actually needed, many of the wanted varieties will be gone, and inferior substitutes may have to be used. Inasmuch as a great part of the garden's success and satisfaction depends on the use of the proper varieties, it is important that the seed be bought while these varieties may still be obtained.

Speaking of varieties, one can do no better than choose those whose past behavior has been satisfactory, or, if the use of novelties is to be attempted, only those should be chosen that have been found satisfactory by neighbor gardeners. It is well to go slow on varieties that are too "new."

Although no two gardners may agree exactly on what a garden should include, there are staple vegetables that appear in all gardens and, although the list that follows may seem old to some gardeners, they may welcome being reminded. On the other hand, many gardeners, not expert, may find the list quite helpful.

Beginning with beans, there should be at least one planting of Red Valentine or Tennessee Greenpod, both early sorts, but the rest of the bush beans should be the stringless sorts, Full Measure or Giant Stringless Greenpod. To have a succession of cabbage, a good idea is for four gardeners to get 100 each of the following "frostproof slips" and divide them: Early Jersey Wakefield, Golden Acre, Copenhagen Market, and Succession. The best carrot is Chantenay, the beets, Crosby's Egyptain, early, and Detroit Dark Red for mid season. As for tomatoes there should be about 2 dozen Earlianas, 3 dozen Stone or Greater Baltimore; the Earlianas and Bonny Best should have been raised in a hotbed, but the seed for the Stone may be sown in the open about April 15, and the seedling set in the garden about a month later. If trouble from wilt has been experienced, varieties that resist this disease should be used instead; these are Break O'Day, Marglobe and Norton.

Guersey should be the parsnip, and Sandwich Island, the salsify. Early greens should beWhite mustard, and Bloomsdale Savoy spinach. For summer greens, choose Lucullus Swiss Chard and New Zealand Spinach. Although many gardeners depend on white dent varieties of field corn for their roasting ears, Adams Early and Bantam Evergreen are earlier, and in the opinion of the writer, better. Midsummer sweet corn is Country Gentleman, or the worm-resistant Howling Mob. Ruby King is the sweet pepper to use, and Black Beauty, the eggplant.

The above list is by no means complete, for there are "specialties" that all gardens should include. These and a "garden budget" will be discussed next week.

Kentucky Farm Radio Program

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WHAS the week of Jan. 30. Each program will begin at 12:45 central standard time.

Jan. 30.—Tobacco market. Records influence farmer's earnings, R. E. Proctor.

Jan. 31.—Tobacco market. Brooder costs and fuels, J. E. Humphrey

Feb. 1.—Tobacco market. Opportunities in 4-H club work, J. W. Whitehouse.

Feb. 2.—Tobacco market. Timely chats with fruit growers, C. O. Eddy.

Feb. 3.—Tobacco market. What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

War Creek Club

The War Creek 4-H club will be organized January 26th. This club accomplished some outstanding work in 1932, and received the county championship banner. This banner will be presented to the club by Mr. J. M. Feltner in February. At that time, we hope all the parents and club members will be present at the schoolhouse.

Wide Use of Brick Brooder

The 400 brick brooders built in 20 counties in the state last year proved so satisfactory that the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, predicts that several thousand will be made on farms this year.

Two hundred brick brooders were made in Barren county last year at an average cost of $1.25. County Agent J. O. Horning reports that they were satisfactory in every respect. County Agent G. H. Karnes of Monroe county, where six brooders were tried last year, says that farmers built a brooder house and brick brooder stove for a cash outlay of only $12.50, which was less than the value of 25 hens which would have been required in brooding chicks in the old way.

All county agents are this year prepared to ssist farmers in building homemade brick brooders, which can be made on many farms at no cost whatever.

4-H Tobacco Project

To date only 31 boys and girls have applied to take the 4-H tobacco project of the ¼ acre as recommended by the Experiment Station. They will be furnished free with enough high grade tobacco seed to sow a bed 9x12 feet, which is sufficient to set out ¼ acre. We hope to get 100 to take this project and enter their tobacco in all shows and fairs which will be held in 1933.

Control of Insect Pests

Now is the time to prepare to fight insect pests when they appear in the spring on tobacco beds and garden vegetables. A good compressed air spray pump can be bought at a cost of not more than $3.00. Most of the mail order companies handle these sprayers. Some of the local merchants will handle the necessary poisons, such as magnesium arsenate, arsenate of lead, etc.

Caney Club

Mr. J. D. Benton called to say he had a bunch of real club members up on their toes to organize their club January 22, and get ready to do some real outstanding project work for 1933.

THE STATE FAIR

Frankfort, Ky., Jan.—The Kentucky State Fair has a net cash ballance of $1,438.59 as contrasted with a deficit of $6,551.96 on February 1, 1932, it is disclosed in a report filed with Governor Laffoon by Nat B. Sewell, State Inspector and Examiner.

The audit indicates a net reduction in the general expense account of more than $15,000. Periods under comparison are Jan. 1, 1931 to Feb. 1, 1932 when State Fair expense totalled $50,662.15, and Feb. 1, 1932 to Nov. 30 1932 when money spent was $31,818.03

Total receipts of the State Fair were $101,593.49 and net expenditures were $99,982.52 within the period of Feb. 1, 1932 to Nov. 30, 1932.

Total expenditures were $164,255.71 with receipts of only $157,253.71 from Jan. 1, 1931 to Feb. 1, 1932.

"These savings," says the report, "make a very commendable showing for the present management. It is evident that the present commissioner has labored under some unfortunate conditions owing to an existing deficit at beginning of the year and to a comparatively large increase in receipts. With these facts in mind, we desire to commend him for the strong efforts made to hold expense within available income."

Pointing out that while the Fair operates only one week in the year that a regular office force of three persons with aggregate salaries of $625.00 a month is employed, the opinion is expressed that this force could be reduced to one person for a portion of the time and a further saving effected.

GOATSKIN SHOES

The average "pairage" of mens shoes produced last year in this country was only one and one-fourth per capita, which goes to show that the people were thrifty in making their old shoes survive. Next spring goatskin is to appear as an approved leather for men's cool and hot weather shoes, and over one hundred representatives of the Shoe and Leather industry of Washington, Boston and New York have resolved to give practical application to the desire of American men to dress their feet as comfortably in hot weather as they dress the rest of their bodies.

It has been determined that the light-weight goatskin shoes which will be worn next Spring and Summer are more than a pound lighter than ordinary men's shoes. The statisticians and technocrats have determined that this will free the man who wears goatskin shoes from lifting an accumulated total of 480 tons of weight during the lifetime of his new goatskins.

Despite its lightness goatskin ranks second to kangaroo in strength, according to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and both of these leathers have more strength than horse, calf, cow or buckskin. Goatskin has its fibers arranged in such a way, according to experts, that it permits the passage of air and insures ventilation.

SOME CHICKEN!

NO, this is not an appreciative comment on a pretty girl, but a comment on the fact that the packers of canned foods have evolved more forms in which to can this highly esteemed domestic bird than seems humanly possible. And, with the perfection which modern commercial canning has attained, these products, as the old English advertisements used to say, "must be tasted to be appreciated."

In the first place you can get whole cooked chickens in cans all prepared and ready to heat and serve. Then you can get boned or boneless chicken, deviled chicken, chicken salad, chicken chop suey, sandwich chicken, chicken tamales and even a product consisting of pure egg noodles in rich chicken broth, with bits of chicken in it, which makes an excellent luncheon dish.

More of the Flock

But this isn't all of the flock of chicken products by any means. Of course the variety of chicken soups is endless. There are chicken broth and chicken consommé and creamed soups with such flavors as peas, celery, asparagus, spinach, tomatoes, okra, mushrooms, onions and potatoes, and a new discovery known as chicken pepper pot. There are also ready-made chicken entrées, including chicken a la king and chicken curry.

But this mere list of chicken products in cans does not begin to convey all that can be done with them. Properly combined with other ingredients they expand into a list of dishes that is practically endless—baked dishes, creamed dishes, pies, croquettes, en casserole, chafing dishes, loaves, salads, sandwiches, mousses, molds and hash.

Cluck! Cluck! Cluck!

We knew that we'd be clucking before we got much further, but the things that can be done with these chicken products are something to cackle about! Here's an astonishing recipe:

Surprise Salad: Peel four tomatoes and scoop out centers, then fill with canned chicken salad to which mayonnaise has been added. Place each tomato on a leaf of lettuce, and, when ready to serve, put a teaspoon of mayonnaise on top of each. It's as simple as that!

And for chicken a la king you don't need any recipe. Just trim all crust from bread slices, and toast them a golden brown. Heat the chicken a la king in the can, and pour over the toast. Place on lettuce leaves, garnish with parsley, and there you are!

Chicken Croquettes: Grind the contents of a can of boned chicken fine, mix with a thick cream sauce, and let mixture cool. Flour hands and mold. Stand in ice box for an hour or more. Roll in beaten egg and then in fine bread crumbs, using one hand for eggs and the other for crumbs. Place in frying basket, and dip in hot fat. Lift and drain.

From the Old South

A succulence from the old South, where everyone knows they perform miracles with chickens, is this Virginia Chicken Pie "made according to old Mammy Jackson's favorite recipe." Here is the way she went about it:

Boil ten whole small white onions and one medium potato cut in small pieces together in salted water. Remove the pieces of potato when cooked, allowing the onions to boil until soft.

Melt two tablespoons bacon fat in saucepan, brown and add three tablespoons chopped raw onions. Brown well, and add two tablespoons flour, stirring until smooth and nice brown. Add two and a half cups of the water in which the onions and potato have been cooked, stirring until smooth and thickened slightly. Add Worcestershire sauce and additional salt and pepper to taste.

Remove the contents from a 6-ounce can of fresh-packed chicken, and, without cutting, arrange pieces in a baking dish with the potatoes, onions and one hard-cooked egg which has been cut in pieces. Sprinkle with parsley. Strain gravy over, and cover with pastry made as follows:

Sift one cup flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder and one-fourth teaspoon salt into a bowl. Add four tablespoons shortening and mix thoroughly with finger tips. Add four tablespoons cold water, and mix just enough to hold together. Put on slightly floured board and roll out very lightly and quite thin.

Cover pie, bringing pastry well over edge. Trim and put a strip about an inch wide around rim. Press edge with fork, and prick top well. Bake in hot oven—450°—about fifteen minutes.

This recipe will serve from four to six people (only four if they are connoisseurs in food), and the complete cost is a little less than sixty cents!

A Good Combination

THIS is the season for sauerkraut. For many people it's never out of season. They "love it in December just as they did in May," to paraphrase an old song. But the prize combination for this sort of weather is sizzling hot high class frankfurters, fresh from the can, and a good big heap of sauerkraut. It looks good, and it smells good and it tastes good and it's easy to prepare. You can't get for a better combination than that.

The Child Reader
by
MARJORIE BARROWS
Editor, Child Life Magazine.

I met Bill's father today.

"Bill's six years old," he said. "He's a hard-headed young man and he treats fairy tales with a withering contempt. He likes real stories. He likes simple books about how things happen. Are there any new books that will fit Bill?"

Marjorie Barrows

I gave him the names of several new ones, for there are lots of Bills in America today and many authors are writing just the sort of books they like.

Real Adventure Best.

If your Bill doesn't take to fairy tales, to legends, to fables, don't force them on him. Offer him instead Charlotte Kuh's delightful "A Train, A Boat, and an Island"—the story of a real family's real trip to Bermuda. Offer him Heluiz Washburne's fascinating "Letters to Channy"—a real mother's letters of a trip around the world written for her own little boy back home. Offer him "The Pilgrim's Party" or "The Cruise of Mr. Christopher Columbus" by Sadybeth and Anson Lowitz, two humorous and very interesting picture books that acquaint younger readers with stirring history.

Perhaps Bill wants to know more about motormen and firemen and what they really do. Mrs. Kuh's books for small children will help him out there. Perhaps he would like "How It All Began," a book that is delightfully written and illustrated by Janet Smalley. It will tell Bill how primitive man watched the lightning and found he, too, could make fire by twirling two sticks around together. Later man found other ways of heating and lighting and at last we got our matches, gas, oil and electricity. The book goes on, in the simplest fashion, to show the beginnings of messages, of travel, clothing, houses. It is a thrilling sort of real fairy tale that particularly appeals to boys like Bill.

Travel Stories Are Good.

What happens to a real letter after it gets posted may also interest some of our very youngest readers. William Siegel, a Russian artist, tells a simple story about that in "Around the World in a Mailbag." Bob and Betty's letter to their father doesn't reach him in San Francisco. So it is forwarded to China, Russia, France, and even to Egypt. But though the various postmen do their best the letter does not finally reach him until he is back in New York again. The pictures make this book especially attractive.

Here are just a few of the new books for fairy-tale-strikers. Many more are to be found in the libraries and bookstores. Just exactly the book your Bill is looking for is waiting for him there. And it is just the right book for him at the present time.

Take him along and let him help find it!

Our Government —How It Operates

By William Bruckart

OUR CURRENCY

THERE is ample reason, in my opinion, why people generally fail to understand money. First, treasury figures show on the basis of income taxes that most of us have very little of it, so little, indeed, that it fails to register, and second, because the processes of government in connection with money are, or appear to be, somewhat complicated.

Money for circulation purposes, of course, has its base in the Constitution. That instrument reposed certain obligations on the treasury in this connection, and the production and distribution of money constitutes one of the two major jobs of the treasury.

In the management of the money, however, the treasury has the assistance of the Federal Reserve board and the Federal Reserve banks. Creation of this auxiliary agency did not come about until recent years—some 18 years ago—and its part in money matters may be described as incidental to its main purpose of aiding business. The need for money and the case of handling it, however, always have seemed to me to be the paramount reasons for its existence, notwithstanding what the law says about it.

In the big underground vaults of the treasury in Washington, in equally great vaults of several of the Federal Reserve banks in cities like New York and elsewhere and in the vaults of the assay offices, which operate with the United States mints, there is a vast store of gold bullion. It amounts to well over $4,000,000,000 in value.

That gold is the basis of our currency; that is why we are said to be on the gold standard. Theoretically, every dollar in paper currency that is outstanding or "in circulation" may be converted into gold at the demand of the holder of that currency. Theoretically, also, the gold standard keeps the dollar at the same value year in and year out, but there is one school of thought in the country who prefer to measure the value of the dollar on the basis of prices of wheat and corn and cotton and other commodities.

All of the paper currency in circulation is produced—actually printed—in one great establishment in Washington, a plant known as the bureau of engraving and printing. It prints your postage stamps, too, but money-making is its main job.

The coins that you have were produced under the direction of the treasury, also, but in the United States mints. They "strike off" the coins from gold or silver or nickel or copper which is acquired and tested for them by the assay offices, tested closely that each bit of metal will be of exactly the same purity, or fineness, as it is called. Whether in the mints or in the printing bureau, almost inconceivable scrutiny is exercised, the most rigid management observed, and that is obviously necessary for if money could be made by everybody, it would not be worth anything to anybody.

The bureau of engraving and printing keeps its great presses in operation constantly, using a distinctive paper, a paper that is hardly possible of being counterfeited. Piles upon piles of bills, ones, twos, fives, tens, twenties and up to $100,000 are the result. They are stored in vaults, every bill numbered and every one accounted for. They are kept there for "ageing." One might say for curing, so they will last longer when they are put into circulation.

To the uninitiated, this process may seem unnecessary. To the government, however, it means saving money for the taxpayers. The cost of circulation, that is, the expense of printing the money and keeping it in circulation, runs into millions each year as you may realize when you know that a bill costs about two-thirds of a cent to manufacture, and there are hundreds of millions of them put out every year.

An idea of this cost is provided also from knowledge that the average one-dollar and the five-dollar bill is fit for circulation only about ten months.

So it behooves the treasury to have very "good" money, as well as sound money, and its experts are constantly studying scientific subjects to find ways to prolong the life of the bill. Numerous kinds of paper have been tried, and countless "treatments" have been given the bills in the experimentation by the experts to find means of making the life of a bill last longer. The maximum, however, seems to be about ten months for the bills that are in constant use like the ones and fives. The two-dollar bill still has superstition attaching to it, so it does not wear out so soon.

Attention might be invited in this connection to the effect of modern business developments on currency. Take the gasoline filling station, for example. The attendants have grease on their hands, not from choice of course, but that grease is not conducive to longer life for the bill you hand him to pay for your gas.

The currency distribution begins after the bills are aged. Each bill bears its individual number. Each bill has to be signed by the secretary of the treasury and the treasurer of the United States. Each one is registered by the register of the treasury. Then an armored car, a regular steel safe in itself, backs up to a guarded door for a load of money.

We have had quite an epidemic of flu, but it seems that the worst is over and all the patients are able to be out again.

Noticing the editoral of last week concerning Bro. Hovermale's platform as a candidate for Representative from the Estill-Jackson district, the writer would suggest that instead of plank no. 8 ,in regard to a sales tax on merchandise, he would insert the following: "I am in favor of abolishing the board of parole commissionsers." The actions of this board have done more to increase crime, and especially, murder than all other things combined, for men do not fear the pen any more, for they know they only have to stay a short time and get a parole. And why do we want to pay the expense of the criminal courts of the state to convict men for murder and then have a board at Frankfort turning them out. Juries are very lenient in their verdicts and when they say ten years in the pen I feel like it should mean just what it says. Of course the advocates of the parole system claim "reform," but it is very few it reforms, as a number of them are soon returned. SPIRIT OF HOPE
